

16. Outfoxed

A long and eerie hiss split the silence of the river. A group of grazing deer moved quickly back into the trees. Birds gave warning calls of danger. The crocodile he was known for his sudden attacks and quickly made his presence known and unfortunately, one old fox didn't notice the warning and continued to run about. The crocodile whipped his tale around and lunged after him. The fox panicked. He desperately turned around and faced his enemy. Never had an animal attempted to face the crocodile! The crocodile was stunned. The fox seized the opportunity and jumped up a tree just behind the crocodile. The sound of jaws snapping shut was all the fox heard as he climbed to the nearer of three branches and out of harm's way.

The hiss of the crocodile broke the silence of the swamp. Would the young fox get away?
